We are saying

NO MORE to domestic abuse.

We asked ourselves #WHATICANDO and we came up with the following:

We've learnt to listen without judgement.

We know it's not easy to know how to respond when someone tells you they have experienced domestic abuse. The most valuable thing we can do is listen without judgement. If someone feels that they are being judged, dismissed or blamed they may no longer feel able to reach out.

We understand the importance of believing what someone tells us.

We know that we may be surprised by what our colleague discloses, but it's important to let them know that we believe them unconditionally. We know how important it is to avoid pressing them for details, rather allow them to tell their story in their own time and words.

We've made sure you can access support.

We have come together and worked in partnership with London based charity Hestia and their Everyone's Business team to ensure that we have trained domestic abuse prevention champions, that you have access to a specialist domestic abuse adviser and that you can find a nearby specialist support service via the Bright Sky app.

We know that this is not enough.

We're committed to seeing real social change on the issue of domestic abuse and we've started by ensuring that we have a domestic abuse Human Resources policy.
